The Impact of Social Media on Saudi Children's Food Habits

In recent years, social media has become an essential part of Saudi children's daily lives. With its quick spread influence, it can easily shape various areas in their life, including diet. The impact of social media on Saudi children's food habits is undeniable, it can lead them to bad food choices and misleading information. That's why it's crucial for parents to act and guide their children's to healthier diet. Most Saudi children spend a lot of time on social media they can get affected by the contents they watch, whether it's advertisement or food challenges videos. According to Guo (2023), conducted a systematic review and meta-analysis examining the impact of unhealthy food marketing on children's and increase children's preference for unhealthy food. According to a research conducted by Alanazi (2022) they conclude that 'fast food' choices and behavior were significantly with the average daily usage of social media. According to Smith (2018) found that digital food advertising, including influencer promotions and targeted advertisements, has a strong impact on children's preference for high-fat and high-sugar foods. These types of marketing strategies are designed to attract children's attention and influence their choices. Many children in Saudi Arabia spend a lot of time on social media and are exposed to unhealthy food advertisements, which can lead to unhealthy eating habits. Social media should be used to promote healthy eating habits, and help children make better food choices. Therefore, parents should monitor their children's use of social media and guide them to choose healthy food. As well as educate them about healthy habits.
